

Mareike Öhler visits Lisanne Vermeer and Boy Scholtze in The Netherlands

Charter visits don't have to be expensive. Charter visits don't have to take several days. Even in one evening you could visit each other!

Mareike Öhler, Hepstedt (Germany) was on a holiday in the Dutch village of Twello in July 2010. Since the Netherlands is not such a big country, she contacted Lisanne Vermeer and Boy Scholtze and asked if it was possible to visit them. Lisanne and Boy didn't have holidays during Mareike's stay, however they decided to meet on Thursday evening in 's-Hertogenbosch, the beautiful capital of the region Noord-Brabant where Esch is located.

After a quick tour through the city, the three had dinner in a typically Bosch' restaurant. The waitress just screamed the menu and the restaurant was filled with laughing and talking people. Of course the evening was ended by having a drink on the big market square of the city. Quickly taking some pictures and then it was time to say goodbye already. Mareike went back to Twello. It was a short meeting, however it was nice to meet each other! Again another example of Charter friendships!
